4.0 DATA

The Data section of this document describes the data stores, data code tables, transaction files, and data elements proposed for the State agency Information System (IS) described in this document. Data stores are groups of data elements that have a common focus and relate to a common entity. These entities represent the persons, places, things, and events that pertain to the WIC Program, and the data elements represent the characteristics of the entities. For example, the Participant data store relates to the entity "WIC Participants" is comprised of participant-related data elements such as the participant's name, address, and proxies. Hereafter, when the term "data store" is used in this document, it is synonymous with the term "code table" in a relational database. Data code tables are a subset of data stores, but they are not modified as frequently as other data stores and are often referenced as "code" tables.

Section 4.1 identifies each of the data stores, describes the purpose of the data store, and lists all the data elements contained in the data store. The data elements used as record keys to uniquely identify the records in each data store are indicated by an asterisk (*). For some data stores, there is a combination of data elements that uniquely identify a record. For these stores, multiple elements are designated with an asterisk. The data elements that are used as foreign record keys are indicated by two asterisks (). A foreign key is the identifier of a data store to which the foreign key refers. It is used to establish a relationship between the data store containing the foreign key and the data store to which the foreign key refers.

For example, to uniquely identify a participant in a nutrition education class, the record will include the Participant Identification Number (Participant data store) and the Education/Training Offer Class Code (Education/Training Offer data store). Because the class information is maintained in the Education/Training Offer Class data store, this data element would be the primary key (*). To identify the participant in the class, the Participant Identification Number would be used. Because this data element resides in the Participant data store, it would be the secondary key ().

Section 4.2 identifies each of the data code tables in much the same way as Section 4.1. Sample data are listed to provide a clearer understanding of the function of the table. The samples offered are illustrative, although not exhaustive. State agencies should carefully review each of the data code tables to determine the complete list of acceptable data values for their State IS.

Section 4.3 describes the transaction files used to exchange data between the WIC information system and other external systems. The transaction files may be used to send data from the WIC information system to other external systems (e.g., CDC surveillance data). The transaction file may also transmit data from external systems (e.g., from the vendor, etc.) to the WIC information system. This section provides a sample of the types of transaction files that may be required by a system. However, depending on individual situations, additional transaction files may be needed by specific States.

Data elements are characteristics of data entities for which the WIC Program needs information. Examples of data elements include Participant Identification Number, Food Instrument Printed Date, Vendor Name, Participant Blood Pressure, and State Food Grant. Data elements for the State agency IS system are described in Section 4.4. Each data element is defined briefly. Section 4.4 also indicates for each data element its format type (alphanumeric, numeric, or date type), edit or validation processes needed to ensure data accuracy, and the data stores and data code tables that contain the data element.

Numerical data that are calculated for reports or screens but not stored in the WIC information system are not included in this section. Detailed information on these elements and the calculations are provided in Section 3.0 under the functional descriptions. In certain cases, calculated data may be stored for historical purposes. Such data may be useful for trend analysis and therefore are included in a data warehouse. When such data are stored, they are included in the description of relevant data stores. Because data stores are related, one data element may appear in multiple data stores. For example, the Participant Identification Number data element is a key element within the Participant and the Participant Health data stores. If the Participant Identification Number is not included in each of these data stores, the system will not relate the participant health data to a particular participant.

4.1   DATA STORES

The data stores identified for the proposed State agency IS system are meant to convey only the logical data requirements rather than the specific tables in a physical implementation of a system's database. FNS understands that the physical database structure of each State agency's system may diverge substantially from the logical scheme suggested in this section. Constraints of a particular database product, processing considerations, and existing system environments may impact the actual design of the physical database. Furthermore, to more clearly convey a programmatic view of the data, the data have not been normalized, as they would be in a physical database design. Consequently, this section is meant only to provide a sample of the types of data stores required. The actual grouping of data elements into specific physical tables is purposely left to the individual State's system designer.

Additionally, because State agency systems vary so widely in the functionality they support, not all data stores or data elements included in this section will be required by every state. However, to allow for maximum flexibility for States to tailor their systems to individual needs, the intent of this section is to be as inclusive as possible. It is anticipated that few States will require as broad a range of data elements as are included in following data store descriptions.

The following data stores have been identified for the proposed State WIC information system:

4.3   DATA TRANSACTION FILES

The WIC information system exchanges data with a number of external systems and entities. The exact configuration of these transaction files depends upon the characteristics of the individual systems, the architectural environments, the system implementation strategies, and the types of data being exchanged. While it would be impractical to stipulate standard transaction files for all WIC information systems, some suggested types of transaction files are described below. These transaction files are used to exchange data sets between the following types of external entities:

- FNS, CDC, and other health/social service entities;
- Vendors;
- Financial Institution/State Treasurer's Office; and
- Central Processing Site/Data Center.

The intent of this section is not to exhaustively cover every type of data transmission, but rather to describe the more common types of transaction files. The transaction file descriptions below present typical data elements or direct the reader to more detailed sources of information about the specific data elements and/or file formats.

4.3.1   TRANSACTION FILES USED TO EXCHANGE DATA BETWEEN WIC STATE AGENCIES AND FNS, CDC, AND OTHER HEALTH/SOCIAL SERVICE ENTITIES

The standard files that are transmitted to and/or from FNS on a regular basis include:

- The Integrity Profile (TIP) File – FNS requires that all State agencies provide the annual TIP data, which provides vendor characteristics, training, compliance activities, and sanctions. It also includes vendor management practices. The TIP data elements are under review, therefore specific information is available from FNS.

- Participant Characteristics Minimum Data Set (MDS)/ Supplemental Data Set (SDS) – FNS requires that States provide the MDS with summary data about WIC participants every other year. States are also strongly encouraged to provide the SDS providing information on the health and nutritional status of WIC participants. Details about the specific data elements and format of this file are provided in Section 3.2.6.2, as well as in Study of WIC Participant and Program Characteristics, 1998.

- Grant Awards – FNS provides yearly grant award information to the State agencies. Some States are beginning to receive this data in electronic format. The grant award data is specified in the description of the Grant data store in Section 4.1. The specific format of the grant award file, however, may vary substantially from State to State.

- FNS 798 Report – FNS requires that States submit the FNS 798 that provides information on food obligations, food outlays, NSA expenditures, and participation each month. Annually, States send the FNS 798 Close-Out Report. States are beginning to transmit this report, detailed in the Section 3.5.4.1 on Financial Management reporting, electronically.

Health and nutrition data from the MDS and SDS are extracted and transmitted to CDC. Additionally, immunization data may be sent to CDC and State Immunization Registries. The specific data sets include, but are not limited to:

- CDC Pediatric Surveillance System (PedNSS) File – These pediatric data are extracted from the SDS data sent to FNS. Information on the data elements and file format can be found in Pediatric Nutrition Surveillance System, U.S. 1980-1991.

- CDC Pregnancy Nutrition Surveillance System (PNSS) File – This prenatal data are extracted from the SDS data sent to FNS. Information on the data elements and file format can be found in Pregnancy Nutrition Surveillance System, U.S. 1979-1990.

- CDC Immunization File[1] – This file includes data about WIC participants' immunization status. The specific data elements and file formats can be found in Recommended Core Data Set for State Immunization Information Systems, extracted from Guidelines for State Immunization Systems (version 2.8.3) and Implementation Guide for Immunization Data Transactions using Version 2.3.1 of the Health Level Seven (HL7) Standard Protocol (Implementation Guide version 2.0).

Individual States may have arrangements with other health and social service agencies including Medicaid, Head Start, Maternal and Child Health Programs, Food Stamps, and others. The specific format of the transaction file will vary depending on the data exchanged. Examples of the types of transaction files that may be used for these exchanges include:

- Referral Transaction File – This file type enables referral data to be exchanged between different agencies. It includes the data described in the Referral data store in Section 4.1

[1] All of the data elements required for this report are not included in the FRED.

- Immunization Transaction File – Although similar, this file is not the official immunization file sent to CDC, but rather it is used to exchange limited immunization data across health providers. (If States wish to collect immunization data, additional data elements not included in the FRED must be defined.)

- Immunization Due File – This file is used to download to an autodialer to generate reminder calls to patients who are due immunizations. It contains data about participants, immunizations due, and appointment times. (If States wish to collect immunization data, additional data elements not included in the FRED must be defined.)

State WIC agencies may also exchange Verification of Certification data across States electronically. A data standard for exchange of VOC information is provided by the Draft Verification of Certification Specification for EBT, May 26, 1998. Although this specification was created to provide standards for smart cards to carry the VOC data, this standard could apply to an on-line transaction file as well.

4.3.2 TRANSACTION FILES USED TO EXCHANGE DATA AMONG THE VENDOR, ACQUIRER, AND THE EBT PROCESSOR

This transaction file is relevant to EBT only. A description is available in the FRED-E.

4.3.3 TRANSACTION FILES USED TO EXCHANGE DATA BETWEEN WIC AND THE EBT PROCESSOR

This transaction file is relevant to EBT only. A description is available in the FRED-E.

4.3.4 TRANSACTION FILES USED TO EXCHANGE DATA BETWEEN WIC AND FINANCIAL INSTITUTION/STATE TREASURER'S OFFICE

To perform settlement and reconciliation in the paper environment, the WIC information system must generate information about food instrument issuance. States vary on how they handle the reconciliation process. In some States, the food instrument issuance data are transmitted to the financial institution or to the State Treasurer's office. In other States, the food instrument issuance data are maintained in the WIC information system and the reconciliation takes place within the system when the food instrument redemption data is received from the financial institution. Some, but not all, States need the Food Instrument Issuance Transaction File. A few States send only a file of authorized vendors to the financial institution performing the pre-payment edits. Generally, the food instrument redemption data are transmitted from the financial institution or State Treasurer's Office. The one-to-one reconciliation of the food instruments, using the food instrument issuance and the food instrument redemption data may occur in various locations (e.g., financial institution, State Treasurer's Office, WIC information system) depending upon the reconciliation process of the individual State. Because the settlement and reconciliation process differs from State to State, the content and format of the transaction file varies. The following types of transaction files are needed to exchange data between the WIC information system and the entity performing settlement:

- Food Instrument Issuance File – This file is used to transmit food instrument issuance data from the WIC information system to the financial institution or State Treasurer's Office. In addition to routing and transaction control data, this file contains the following types of data:
  - Food Instrument Identification Number
  - Participant Identification Number
  - Food Instrument Estimated Value
  - Food Instrument Issuance Date
  - Food Instrument Maximum Value
  - Food Instrument Maximum Value
  - Food Instrument Valid End Date
  - Food Instrument Valid Start Date
- Food Instruments Redemption File – This file is used to transmit food instrument redemption data from the financial institution or State Treasurer's Office to the WIC information system. In addition to routing and transaction control data, it includes the following types of data:
  - Vendor Identification Number
  - Vendor Outlet Identification
  - Food Instrument Identification Number
  - Participant Identification Number
  - Food Instrument Redemption Value
  - Food Instrument Redemption Batch
  - Food Instrument Reject Count
  - Food Instrument Reject Reason
  - Food Instrument Repayment Date
  - Food Instrument Vendor Redemption Date
- Authorized Vendor File – This file is used to transmit authorized vendors to the financial institution performing settlement. It contains date information, control and routing information, and vendor identification numbers for authorized WIC vendors.

4.3.5   TRANSACTION FILES USED IN SYSTEM ADMINISTRATION AND TO EXCHANGE DATA BETWEEN LOCAL WIC AGENCIES AND THE CENTRAL PROCESSING SITE/DATA CENTER

A number transaction files are required to support system administration functionality. Files are created to assist data archive, purge, back up, and recovery, as well as to enable system auditing. To support financial modeling, ad hoc reporting, data warehousing, and other data analysis functionality, the system should import and export files of data. The import/export capability is particularly important in the States in which some functionality is performed external to the WIC IS, but this external processing uses data from the main WIC information system. Some examples include:

- Archive File – Depending on the architecture of the system, data for archiving may be transmitted from a local agency to the Central Processing Site or the Data Center. Centralized systems use the archive transaction file to transmit data to the storage location. In addition to containing the specific data elements being archived, the Archive File typically contains:
  - Archive File Number*
  - Archive End Date
  - Archive Start Date
  - Archive Last Modified Date
  - Archive Last Modified User
  - Archive Location
  - Archive Name
  - Archive Record Type

- Transaction Log – In some distributed processing systems, a transaction log that includes a copy of all daily transactions (i.e., system updates) is sent to the Central Processing Site, where it is kept in a central database in case any local database needs to be restored or a clinic system rebuilt. In addition to routing and control information, the content of transaction log will depend upon the transactions performed at the local agency.

- Audit File – In some systems, a transaction file documenting any changed data elements is generated each day and transmitted to the Central Processing Site to be maintained in case it is needed for audit purposes. The audit file contains the changed data elements, the user responsible for the change, and the date of the change.

- Import/Export Files – Data existing in the WIC IS may needed for processing in PC based applications (e.g., spreadsheets for financial modeling or caseload allocation or may be used by other systems (e.g., financial management system or an autodialer system). Conversely, the WIC information system may need data from other legacy systems. The WIC information system should be able to create selected data files in different formats for export, as well as to accept imported files in a variety of formats.
